McCombs Issues Appeal
For Democratic Funds

After a conference with Chairman DeLoach of the Democratic Congressional Committee, National Chairman William H. McCombs of the Democratic National Committee has issued an appeal for campaign funds as follows:

"The Democratic national committee needs money with which to meet the necessary expenses of the present campaign. The splendid record of the present and Congress has its own best advocate, but it is our manifest duty to spare no effort to place the facts clearly before the people in order to insure the return of a Democratic Congress. And the cost of printing and traveling must be met. Therefore, we appeal most earnestly to all citizens who would uphold the President by winning a vote of confidence in his Administration to send contributions immediately to Robert Wells, treasurer of the Democratic national committee, St. Louis, Mo."

WAR WILL AID ARMY
OF U. S., SOLON SAYS

Chamberlain Believes Conflict Will Bring About Laws for Greater Efficiency.

That the war in Europe will not bring about an enlargement of the standing army of the United States, but that it will have a tendency to promote legislation to increase the efficiency of the army, is the view expressed by Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

Senator Chamberlain is no believer in a large standing army, but he does believe in keeping such an army as the nation has, at the highest point of efficiency. Moreover, he feels that adequate provision should be made for the arming and equipping of a large force.

Especially in the matter of field artillery, Senator Chamberlain thinks the country could not omit to make wise preparation. How helpless the United States would be from the standpoint, not merely of men, but of armament, in case of war with a first class power has been many times emphasized by military experts. It takes years to build up a supply of modern fighting artillery. The United States has made a good beginning in providing high class field guns, but it is only a beginning, and would soon run short of batteries if it undertook the equipping of armies in a great conflict.

Against Large Army.

"The people of this country will never permit a large standing army," said Senator Chamberlain. "I do not expect to see the European war have much of an effect on military legislation by Congress next winter. For my part, I see no likelihood that we will become involved in a struggle with Europe sometime ago, a resolution giving authority to increase the army organizations to their full strength. That would make the force about 110,000 men. I believe this should be done."

"I feel that while we should not have a large standing army, such as we have should be kept at the very highest point of efficiency. That will be what I shall advocate. Moreover, we should make ample provision for war materials. What is the use of having an army if adequate equipment cannot be had for them? The shortage in field artillery is something which has been repeatedly pointed out. I believe it was calculated that when it came to field artillery we had even less than Mexico." Senator Chamberlain believes the true American policy is to have plenty of young men in this country trained to the use of arms, without being taken from civil life. This is along the lines of the Swiss plan. It is in harmony with what some of the ablest American army men in recent years have advocated. He thinks a great work can be done in this respect by the schools.

Schools Aid Plan.

"A great deal has been done already in the schools to give the boys and young men a knowledge of military affairs which would be valuable in case of war," said Senator Chamberlain. "The agricultural colleges, for instance, have done much through the training and instruction given to army officers detailed to them. I think the time will come when the high schools generally will give such training."

"I do not want a large standing army on the one hand, but on the other I do not want a nation ignorant of the use of arms. There was a time not long ago when every man, woman, and child in the West could use a gun. Now most of them don't know a shotgun from a revolver. It is in tragedy training the young men in the use of the rifle would go far in the direction of giving the nation a better prepared army, as it needs for any emergency which may arise."

It is interesting in this connection that Lord Kitchener in talking of the training of the British forces in the present war laid emphasis first of all not on the niceties of parade ground evolution, but on training the recruits how to shoot.

Rheumatic Fever

Surrenders to Anti-Kamnia Tablets

In the treatment of Rheumatic Fever many physicians employ purgatives, but Dr. M. P. Oved thinks that a mild laxative is better. When the patient is bilious he gives calomel in small doses, one-fifth of a grain every four until a grain has been taken. Then after four hours he gives the patient a half ounce of elixir of magnesia, with syrup of lemon to disguise the taste, or he keeps the bowels open with the mild laxative "Acrida." The diet should be light, and all animal food should be excluded as far as possible from the dietary. IN LOCAL FINANCIAL CIRCLES

Each succeeding week is marked by further improvement in the commercial and financial situation of the United States. Daily orders of large proportions are being placed with American manufacturers and increased exports are scaling down the unfavorable balance of trade held abroad, to meet which the $100,000,000 gold pool was formed. The effect of these developments has been to place foreign exchange in a more favorable position, and to dissipate the pessimism that accompanied the stagnation of the nation's business immediately after the outbreak of war in Europe.

The manner in which New York, the financial center of this country, has met the financial crisis that confronted it, has caused bankers to conclude that New York is to become the great money clearing house for the world. An official of one of the largest of New York banks recently said: "An event has recently occurred in South America which in its broadest aspect is epoch making. Recently when payment was being made for a shipment of hides purchased in Argentina, the seller asked for bills drawn on New York in dollars, instead of on London in pounds. This was the first time the history of Argentina that American exchange had been accepted in payment of American purchases. It means the establishment of a new financial center in the United States, Canada, and South America, with New York as the clearing house."

Cotton Exports Revive.
One of the brightest features in the re-establishment of foreign trade is the revival in cotton exports and increased orders for American-made cotton goods. The week ended October 7 marked the greatest total in cotton exports since the outbreak of the war.

Miss Mary Judd, one of an important New England mill, discussing the cotton situation in Boston a few days ago, said that the New England cotton industry was just beginning to get the first tangible evidence of war orders. Within two weeks, he added, 200,000 yards of cotton duck have been ordered for export—presumably for tent purposes—and 500,000 yards of crash had been ordered by the French government. This did not represent a stupendous amount in dollars and cents, but it showed a revival in cotton goods demand, and was looked upon as a forerunner for other large orders which may go far to clearing the present serious state existing in the South.

France placed New York mills another large order, calling for 30,000 dozen 50 per cent woolen shirts. These are for the French army. The war has stimulated gasoline exports also. Between September 2 and October 8 more than 200,000 barrels were shipped from New York, or five times the normal export of the product within that period.

A large part of the supply is supposed to have reached Germany by round about methods, and is being used to furnish fuel for the automobiles and aeroplanes operated by the Kaiser's army.

One of the most serious situations confronting this country, according to financiers, is the financial condition of the great railroad systems. Railroad heads in both the East and West are continually endeavoring to increase their operating revenues, and to reduce their expenditures, and betterment expenditures, and reduction in revenues.

Railroads Cut Expenses.
The marked economy to which the transportation lines are now resorting to cut down operating costs is revealed in the reports for August submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission by 139 roads covering 183,127 miles. The roads reported a net income of $21,783,974, as compared with $27,421,315 for the same month of 1913. Despite the decrease of nearly $10,000,000 in gross revenues, the net earnings were $7,208,979, against $9,882,880 for last year, or an increase of $2,676,109.

In the field of legislation the country has been most concerned during the past week with consideration of the Clayton anti-trust measure and the war tax bill. The former, after receiving several amendments at the hands of the Senate, which made it a stronger and saner bill, is now awaiting the signature of President Wilson. The war tax bill has reached the Senate, and like the anti-trust bill, probably will undergo certain changes there, which, it is generally believed, will improve it.

HIGH SCHOOL CADET
ENLISTMENT HEAVY

Officers of School Regiments Announced—May Form Another Company.

With the announcement of the company officers and the formation into companies and battalions of the pupils of the respective schools, the Washington High School Cadet Corps of 1914 was brought into being today. Assistant Superintendent of Schools Kraemer, who has supervision of the cadets, stated in making public the names of the commissioned officers that the assignment of officers to companies would be made by the principals of the several schools, with the advice of the military committee.

The selection of the non-commissioned officers has not yet been made, but candidates in the second and third-year classes are being considered by the several committees in charge and before the end of the week the sergeants and corporals will be designated.

Mr. Kraemer is pleased with the unusual interest manifested among the boys. While provision has only been made for three companies at Central High, it is more than probable that a fourth will be organized. There is also a remote possibility that four companies will be necessary at the McKinley Manual Training School, where the enlistments are large.

Cost of Uniforms.

No time will be lost in perfecting the organizations and before the end of the week tailors will be on the ground measuring the boys for their uniforms. The contract price this year is lower than it has been for several years past and all materials entering into the uniforms will be rigidly inspected by the experts of the quartermaster's corps of the United States army before acceptance.

A flat price of $15 will cover the complete uniform for privates, including cap, insignia, and vest. While the vest is not wanted, the cost will be $14.00. For the officers the cost will be $12.00, without the vest.

With the announcement of the company officers today, the regimental officers having been previously made known, the complete commissioned personnel of the organization is as follows: Regimental officers: Colonel, Gilbert Church, Clark, Eastern; Lieutenant colonel, J. E. Porter, McKinley; major, First Battalion, Chester Bassett, Central; major, Second Battalion, Bain Lightfoot, Western; major Third Battalion, M. J. Fittus, McKinley; regimental adjutant with rank of captain, Ernest Williams, Central; regimental quartermaster with rank of captain, D. T. McNair, McKinley.
